Are you ‘Dressed for Church on Sunday Morning’?

Zadia B. Tyson encourages readers to focus on discipleship, worship, fellowship and stewardship instead of outward appearances

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. – Returning the publishing scene, published author Zadia B. Tyson announces the release of “Dressed for Church on Sunday Morning” (published by WestBow Press), a spiritual guidebook that encourages believers to focus on discipleship, worship, fellowship and stewardship as they carry out God’s plan and pattern their lives after Christ.

The book shares the biblical truth that God is more interested in what is in the heart of people rather than their outward appearances. Tyson reminds that in the life of a Christian, it is being “spiritually dressed” that reveals who he or she is in Christ Jesus.

“God is not interested in what we look like on the outside, but He looks at the heart of man. Whether dressed up or dressed down for church, God told us to worship Him in Spirit and truth and makes no mention of a dress code for worship service,” Tyson points out.

With the publication of “Dressed for Church on Sunday Morning,” the author hopes to remind readers to look into the important Christian disciplines and not to concentrate on deceiving outward appearances.
